TWENTY-EIGHTH REPORT

ON THE

DISTRICT, CRIMINAL,

AND

PRIVATE LUNATIC ASYLUMS

IN IRELAND.

TO

HIS GRACE JOHN WINSTON, DUKE OF MARLBOROUGH, K.G.,

LORD LIEUTENANT-GENERAL AND GENERAL GOVERNOR OF IRELAND.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR GRACE,

INTRODUCTORY.

In the last Parliamentary Report, that for 1877, which we had the honour to address to your Grace, a return was given of the number of lunatics under our immediate supervision, and of the places in which they were detained. They amounted on the 31st December, that year, to a total, between both sexes, of 12,380; 6,047 being males, and 6,332 females, thus distributed:—

Statistical Summary.

	M.	F.	T.
In Public Asylums, . . .	4,393	3,790	8,183
In Dundrum (Central), . .	133	34	167
In Lucan Government Asylum, .	4	18	22
In Private Asylums, . . .	249	387	636
In Poorhouses, ...	1,268	2,104	3,372
	6,047	6,333	12,380

At a corresponding date in 1878, the insane were located as follows:—

	M.	F.	T.
In District Asylums, . .	4,550	3,857	8,407
In Central Asylum, . .	140	37	177
In Lucan Government Asylum, .	4	18	22
In Private Asylums, . . .	257	385	642
In Poorhouses, ...	1,320	2,017	3,337
Total, . . .	6,271	6,314	12,585

There thus appears to be an increase of inmates in the above Institutions, amounting to 205, of which increase, District Asylums, in consequence of additional accommodation, have most largely participated, while there has been a small decrease of 35, in Poorhouses. The increase of residents in asylums is not altogether owing to the admission of primary or acute cases; other causes have tended to it.

INTRODUCTORY.

Statistics.

The deaths as well as cures in the year 1878 have been proportionately somewhat less than in the preceding year, while relapses have exceeded those in 1877 by thirty re-admissions.

The actual cases of first attack of insanity in the periods just referred to, are all but identical, there being only ten more in the latter year, or 1,934, as against 1,924 in the former.

On the score of relapses, males appear to have been in excess by fully 16 per cent. over females; a circumstance fairly referable to the fact that physical causes are not only more prevalent than moral, but especially so in regard to males.

Admissions.

The total admissions during the past year, namely, 2,366, comprise 1,278 males and 1,088 females, of whom 178 were over 60 years; while between the ages of 20 and 40, 1,264 patients, in like proportion as to sex, were also admitted.

Comparing the general statistics of lunacy in all its different forms, as before us for the past five years, a marked uniformity in relative proportions is perceptible, so we may fairly assume that the principle of averages holds good in mental affections as existing in the United Kingdom in general; certainly, so in the population of this country, which average may be set down at the rate of 3 insane to about 1,200 sane.

Authority for Admissions.

With regard to the authority for admission, an important consideration ought not, perhaps, to be omitted here. The more correct practice, as in England—that by order of a Board, has, in great measure, been superseded in Irish asylums—ninety out of a hundred cases being taken in as urgent by resident physicians, or through magisterial committals. Two drawbacks are attendant on this system—the first, an uncertainty as to the proper chargeability of patients—the second, a want of information as to their previous history and symptoms—much being left to guess-work in the early stages of treatment. Still there is a benefit derivable therefrom, as lunatics are thus prevented from injuring themselves or others.

Recoveries.

The actual recoveries, 1,047—532 males and 515 females—constitute a fair ratio, as to sex, on the aggregate number under treatment during the year. While in regard to the improved, who were taken home by their friends, reaching a total of 221—124 men, 97 women—a nearly similar proportion obtains. Looking to the per-centage of cures on the total resident, as well as to annual admissions, one year with another during the past decade, there would seem but little variation in Irish District Asylums. They may be fairly set down as ranging from 44 to 47 on recent cases, and from 11 to 13 on the aggregate in them.

Of the recovered, 197 had passed their fiftieth year; eleven of them being reported as over seventy.

Mortality.

It may be here remarked with respect to the mortality in Irish asylums, that generally speaking, it is lower than in like institutions elsewhere, by nearly 1 per cent. In 1878, the deaths, 817, upon the total under treatment were 7¾ per cent., being somewhat less than in the preceding twelve months. Of these 2 were from suicide, the first by a male in the Belfast, the second by a female in the Londonderry Asylums. In each case a Coroner's inquest was duly held; as exculpatory verdicts were returned, it is needless to advert further to them. INTRODUCTORY.

Printed image digitised by the University of Southampton Library Digitisation Unit

Fortunately homicidal propensities are not prevalent among the actual insane out of doors, still less when under treatment in asylums; for exciting causes there are in great measure suppressed. Homicidal Propensities.

It is wonderful, however, how means are stealthily prepared occasionally, and opportunities sought by the suicidally-disposed for attaining their object, to guard against which must be a never-ceasing cause of deep anxiety to the superintendents and staffs of lunatic asylums. Very nearly 7 per cent., or 572 patients, in confinement at the close of the year, were deemed suicidal. Suicidal.

Two fatal accidents, against which, however, no foresight could have guarded, occurred. An epileptic lunatic at Richmond, and another at Sligo, were found dead from suffocation in their cells by the night watch. The remaining 812 deaths were attributable to the usual causes of mortality, the most predominant being pulmonary affections, 320, as against 223 of a cerebral character, and 172 from debility and old age. Seven male patients escaped during the year; four of them were convalescent, three still uncured. Accidents.

Adding to the 8,183 inmates at the close of 1877, the admissions 2,336, during the succeeding year, 10,548 would constitute the total under treatment in 1878. Deducting from which, recoveries, removals by friends, deaths, and escapes as above given, there remained in district asylums at the opening of the present year 8,407 persons—4,550 men, 3,857 women. Number in Asylums.

A classification of the preceding aggregate would, as regards their mental condition, distinguish them as follows:—1,840 lunatics, probably curable; 5,795 probably incurable; besides 576 epileptics, and 196 idiots. Many of the two latter are occasionally violent and refractory. Thus the curable would scarcely number 28 per cent. of the total under treatment. Analyzing the condition of the incurables, many, unpromising though they may seem, through scientific treatment and suitable occupations ultimately recover. The great majority, however, for the most part tranquil and reasonable on many subjects, are liable to sudden outbreaks of passion. As a rule the most useful, they are nevertheless uncertain, and, if excited, become dangerous. For months plausible and quiet, they are subject to insane paroxysms, which continue for indefinite periods, and then completely subside to recur, frequently, in an aggravated form. Perhaps of all the inmates of an asylum, none require a more constant and careful supervision, and all the appliances a well organized establishment can afford, both for their own and the safety of others, as may be inferred from the fact that no less than 1,315 were admitted as dangerous in 1878, either by warrant of the Lord Lieutenant or by magisterial committals. Hence, a very serious responsibility is entailed on the medical officers of asylums in regard to their absolute discharge, however convalescent they may appear; or to their removal to other establishments when not recovered. Classification. Dangerous Lunatics.

INTRODUCTORY.

Some of those painful incidents which, from time to time, harrow public feelings, from the untoward destruction of human life, are the deeds of patients comprised in this class.

Removals.

Doubtless no inconsiderable number of inmates, composed of aged and utterly demented lunatics, as well as of epileptics and idiots, might be located in secondary institutions easy of access, situated in the immediate vicinity of district asylums, and thereby to a considerable extent existing ones would be eased; but as to any economy, bearing in view the Treasury rate in aid, little would be gained by the ratepayers at large on the score of current maintenance.

Lunatics different from ordinary patients.

It should be remembered that incurables from physical and incurables from mental affections are not altogether in the same category, though the identity of term tends to place both before the public in the same light—the lunatic, being irresponsible for his actions both morally and legally, must be judged of by his peculiarity of temperament, equally as it effects himself and society. Hence, when it is said, and truly said, that an asylum is crowded with patients not likely to recover, the question should be asked —are the individuals safer and better circumstanced both personally and socially than if they were located in a less guarded establishment?

Expenditure.

The expenditure with which we have to deal is that for the year 1877, inasmuch as audit certificates, but not transmitted to us in due time for an earlier publication, are required in support of its exactitude in detail. It amounted to a total of £200,031 8s. 9*d.* on an average number of 8,116 patients, being £23 17*s.* 3*d.* per head; in 1876 it was £192,265 16*s.* 5*d.*, or £24 13*s.* 8*d.* per head, there being in that year 7,952 as an average of inmates; consequently a diminution in the capitation charge has arisen in 1877 of 16*s.* 5*d.*

Rate in aid.

If from the above total in 1877 the Treasury rate in aid be deducted, namely, £80,379 16*s.*, with payments from contributing patients, £3,518 10*s.* 8*d.* the actual outlay in Irish asylums, as met directly by local rates, amounted to £116,133 2*s.* 1*d.* This current maintenance is definite, including every charge incidental to their support and supervision. In fact, building outlay alone is not contained among the items. It comes within the department of the Commissioners of Control; the money required being procured through Treasury advances, while its repayment extends to a series of years under the Loans Act of 1878.

Funds for Maintenance.

At the Summer Assizes of last year, the Act of 38-9 Vic. came into operation. Previously, and since the passing of the 1st and 2nd George IV., cap. 23, quarterly advances were applied for through our office by the different District Asylum Boards to the Lord Lieutenant in Council for current maintenance, and on their order all required moneys were issued in their favour by the Treasury. These advances, which bore no interest, were repaid half-yearly by grand jury presentments. The present statute directs that Boards of Governors shall transmit to the Inspectors twice annually estimates of the amounts necessary for these different institutions, which, when examined and passed by them, and subsequently countersigned by the Chief or Under Secretary, are to be forwarded to the various secretaries to Grand Juries to be duly presented for and fiated by the judges on circuit at the next assizes. The amount being a first charge on the public is immediately payable into bank to the credit of the Boards. Than this arrangement nothing can be more simple or satisfactory in its operation. INTRODUCTORY.

Assuming, and we apprehend that the calculation is very approximate—certainly not in excess—that provision for 9,600 inmates will be necessary to meet all the requirements of the insane poor of Ireland, and regarding the question simply in a fiscal point of view, their annual maintenance may, we think, be fairly set down for the future at £23 10s. per head, constituting a total of £225,600, subtracting from which the capitation rate in aid—£10 8s. a year, in the aggregate £99,840, as well as probably £5,760 from contributory patients, the net lunatic cost to the country would be £120,000, which, levied on its rateable property, £13,600,000, might be set down at 2*d.* and the tenth of a penny in the pound sterling. Probable future expenditure.

Instead, however, of being accommodated in district asylums, if these lunatics were located in poorhouses, from the character of their malady they should be treated as hospital patients, and have besides a special staff of attendants for their own safety, and the protection not only of others, but of property. The average cost of an ordinary patient in a workhouse infirmary, if the varied items of expenditure as obtains in the debit of asylum outlay be minutely totted up, including all establishment charges, physicians, clergymen, matrons, masters, clerks, and other officials, cannot be under 5s. a week; so that, bearing in view the rate in aid, there is really a gain to the Irish public, quoad direct taxation of the difference between £120,000 and £124,800, according to the existing system. Hence it would appear that not only is a more suitable treatment established for a section of society bearing to the general community a definite ratio, as the statistics of insanity demonstrate, but one more economical to the public in behalf of a class deprived of liberties and social privileges, from a visitation of Providence in the vast majority of instances, for doubtless few, but very few, comparatively speaking, are in part responsible for their own misfortune. Asylum maintenance not greater than for patients in Union.

In 1874 the expenditure of this country on the current maintenance of its lunatic poor, averaging daily 7,497 asylum inmates, amounted to £190,511 15s. According to the preceding calculation 9,600 persons under a like treatment would be annually supported at about £120,000, or £70,000 less, for fully two thousand more patients. Hence theories that could be advanced five years ago, cannot owing to the late Treasury grant be now well sustained.

In previous reports we had the satisfaction of adverting in favourable terms to the mode in which the accounts of institutions under our immediate supervision had been testified to by the Government auditors. On the present occasion the same agreeable opportunity is afforded us: for on analyzing all the returns transmitted to this office under the Act 31 and 32 Vic., cap. 97, no irregularity tending to the loss of a shilling has occurred, with the exception of deficiencies in the storekeeper's department Audit of Accounts.

INTRODUCTORY.

at Lendonderry. At the same time, it is but right to state, the books of the clerk there were kept in a satisfactory manner, all cash received by him was duly accounted for, and the outlay fully authorized.

Scale of Salaries and Wages.

While on the subject of expenditure, we would again observe that in some asylums a scale of wages exists, not adequate to secure the employment of suitable attendants in the first instance, or their subsequent continuance, inasmuch as after having acquired experience, they not infrequently leave for better payment elsewhere. It is an unsuccessful sort of economy not to requite officers and servants in district asylums in a liberal manner, taking their responsibilities into account, and the nature of their avocations, but particularly after a long and faithful employment.

Suggested improvement.

As the statute is administered it certainly cannot be agreeable to the Lord Lieutenant or the Privy Council to have applications incessantly submitted to them for Orders to authorize an increase of a few pounds, mayhap, a few shillings, to the wages of an artisan or a subordinate attendant. It might be well, therefore, as already proposed by us, if a discretionary power were delegated to Boards of Governors by the Lord Lieutenant in Council, under whom, by statute, the fiscal control and management of district asylums are solely placed, reserving to the Inspectors, if deemed just, an authority to fiat such increases for the satisfaction of the auditors; there however being a distinct limit beyond which they should not be allowed to extend without a specific Order in Council.

Satisfactory progress of Asylums.

The working of public institutions for the insane in this country in 1878, has, as hitherto, been highly satisfactory, their various resident medical superintendents devoting every care to the well-being of the inmates, both in a domestic and professional point of view, in which latter they have been warmly supported by the visiting physicians. The general staff, including matrons, clerks, store-keepers, as well as subordinate officials and attendants, are as a body, deserving of much credit. In fact, during the twelve months just expired, no serious causes of complaint, involving cruelty or criminal neglect of patients, have arisen.

Chaplains.

We find, as so frequently noted heretofore by us, that the regular visitation of chaplains continues to be productive of much benefit, not only to inmates, who are capable of appreciating religious observances, but as exercising a wholesome influence over those in charge of them.

Amusements.

From year to year increased means of amusement are devised for the patients, who last summer, at various asylums, were permitted to enjoy excursions under the care of watchful attendants.

Reports to Parliament.

The frequent recurrence of reports to Parliament, once annually on the state of a department limited in its extent, though important alike in a public and individual aspect, cannot afford much of novelty or of interest in detail, for, in truth, no sooner almost are returns obtained in one year from local institutions, than like forms are transmitted to be filled up, for the succeeding.

For example, if the number of epileptics, idiots, and imbeciles, resident in the 29 workhouses of Connaught were contrasted as regards the two years, 1877 and 1878, there would not appear from the complicated tables and printed returns before us, a difference of more than 9 individuals in the two years. Similarly in Munster, with its 51 poorhouses, there is only a variation of 11 in the same periods; while as regards the mentally affected of all ages and types in Poor Law Unions, in 1878, forming an aggregate of 3,337, twelve pages devoted to statistical figures do not expose a difference beyond one per cent. on the preceding year. INTRODUCTORY. Uniformity of their deductions.

In no branch of the public service is this circumstance more observable than in the lunacy, and, perhaps, with less practical results, inasmuch as the responsible head of each asylum district affords annually to the residents in it, a detailed account of all matters, monetary and personal, of interest to the ratepayers. The enunciation of this doctrine may appear as pointing to a subterfuge from trouble, but it is not so intended, and the more particularly as the Executive is at all times kept thoroughly cognizant by the Inspectors of the working of district asylums.

If in their office an annual record system were established, it appears to us that more comprehensive and practical deductions could be obtained, by taking the relative statistics of a series of years, and contrasting them with each other, than as at present by publishing details from twelvemonth to twelvemonth, which are fluctuating, and dependent in great measure on chance occurrences. Record system.

As in the last and previous reports, we dwelt at considerable length on the general requirements of the insane, in regard to accommodation and other matters at the time worthy of notice; we shall, on the present occasion, simply refer to those institutions in which, during the progress of the past year, any increase or particular improvements, have been effected. Requirements of Insane.

Commencing with the Richmond or Metropolitan Asylum, a destruction of one of the wings of which by fire unhappily occurred in 1877, we are happy to say that the buildings have been completely restored, and in a very workmanlike manner, creditable to the contractor. The cost thereof, amounting to £5,000, was covered by insurances, so that beyond the inconvenience, and a very serious one, no actual loss was incurred. The interior being now completed, merely requires to be furnished, when it will be occupied by the inmates of the division, amounting to 120. Richmond.

At Maryborough some structural alterations and enlargements connected with the kitchen and laundries are being made, and approach completion. Maryborough.

At Mullingar very important and efficient arrangements are being carried out under able supervision, for insuring a constant supply of water, and protecting the house in case fire should unfortunately break out or extend, by disassociating the different wings from each other by fire-proof walls and iron partitions. Mullingar.

With regard to the other district asylums in the province of Leinster no comment is at present needed.

At the Cork asylum a very considerable increase of accommodation—one for 240 beds—has just become available; effected by the erection of well-devised buildings in the same style of architecture as the original, and which unite the former wings with the centre, previously connected only by low galleries. Cork.

Introductory.

With this dwelling accommodation, varied and necessary alterations and additions have been provided in the construction of out-offices, of large and healthful airing courts, of a spacious dining-hall for 700 patients, with other minor works, on all which a sum of about £16,600 has already been expended. The institution, including infirmaries, is now adequate for the reception of fully 1,030 patients.

Waterford.

At Waterford certain structural undertakings adverted to in our last Report, are being carried out, and nearly completed.

Limerick.

Those at Limerick, too, are now all but finished, and furnished in detail, at an estimated cost of £18,000.

Killarney.

The Killarney asylum has been also rendered available through recent enlargements, in part occupied at the close of the year, for 100 additional inmates. The water supply being found to be limited and uncertain, both in amount and quality, it is in the immediate contemplation of the Local Board, with the approval of the Commissioners of Control, to convey, by means of an aqueduct from a hill distant about three-quarters of a mile, an ample quantity, so as to command the highest level of the institution, up to the present £12,000 have been expended.

Armagh. Londonderry.

In the Province of Ulster we regret to observe that the state of the two important counties of Armagh and Londonderry, continues to be very unsatisfactory with respect to their insane poor.

Having already placed our views before the Executive so largely, it is now unnecessary to refer to them, as the question in its various bearings awaits only its decision.

Ulster Asylums.

The condition of the Tyrone, Down, and Omagh districts, and, indeed, of the Belfast, presents a marked contrast with that of the two to which we have just adverted, particularly the three first-named. At Belfast, however, there continues room for improvement with reference especially to suitable means for day-room classification, to stores, to workshops, infirmaries, and a becoming place of worship.

The land attached to the Down asylum, 110 acres, of which fifty were purchased last year for £5,800, is now ample, and we anticipate, independently of giving constant employment to the patients, will prove, through good farming and unpaid labour, a source of much economy. We may add that experience confirms our belief that, of all the adjuncts to the successful treatment of lunatics, in a curative as well as a tranquilizing point of view, occupation, particularly out-door, is most to be relied on. The insane, no doubt, may safely, perhaps more safely, be cooped up within restricted limits, but their satisfactory treatment declines as a result therefrom.

Sligo.

As at Down, Omagh, Maryborough, and some other asylums, an extensive farm belongs to that at Sligo, containing eighty acres.

The Governors there have just laid out a sum of £18,000 in procuring additional accommodation for the insane of its two constituent counties, and in general improvements, which, being deemed necessary, were recommended by the Commissioners of Control, and duly sanctioned by the Lord Lieutenant in Council. Indeed, we may add, that the district institutions of the province of Connaught, which, comparatively speaking, is not as wealthy as the other three, are certainly conducted in a liberal spirit by their respective Boards. INTRODUCTORY.

For the purpose of increasing the general accommodation and the construction of a fever hospital for epidemic and fever cases, a sum of £4,000 has been just advanced for the Castlebar asylum by an Order in Council. Castlebar.

WORKHOUSES.

WORKHOUSES

The total number of the mentally affected of all denominations, in workhouses, as obtained by us through the Local Government Board was 3,335 at the 31st December, 1878, being 37 less than in 1877. 1,241 are represented as lunatics, 1,394 idiots, 702 epileptics. Patients in them.

It is gratifying to find on examining the returns for some years past, that if the idiotic element under fifteen years of age be computed in Ireland it amounts only to 88; if between 15 and 30, to 395; and if over 30, to 911; from which the inference may be naturally drawn that idiocy is on the decline in this country.

As a rule, the above-named classes occupy special apartments, known, in the primitive construction of workhouses, as the idiots' cells.

We cordially recognize, from our frequent visits to these establishments, a general disposition on the part of Boards of Guardians throughout the kingdom to meet more liberally all just requirements, and to carry out our suggestions in behalf of the insane so far as the restricted capabilities of poorhouses permit. A material benefit would result were paid attendants employed, but bearing in view the fact that in some workhouses there may be but four or five, even less, mentally incapable to look after themselves, it would not be quite fair to the ratepayers to increase taxation in their regard, by the employment of special warders to take charge of them in each union. The best solution of the difficulty might, probably, be found by allocating, wholly or partially, one or more workhouses in each district, according to its size, to the reception of harmless idiots, epileptics, and the utterly demented or fatuous, who are now diffused through no less than 163 unions, in most unequal proportions. Many years ago, and subsequent to the inquiries of a Special Committee of the House of Lords, the erection of four provincial hospitals for idiots, imbeciles, and a certain class of incurables was adverted to in a report to Parliament. In our opinion provincial depots would not prove to be so successful as might be wished; the number of counties attached to them, as for example, twelve in Leinster, would cause much embarrassment in their working, while unavoidable expenses and inconveniences consequent upon the conveyance and return of patients from remote localities, perhaps from 100 to 130 miles distant, must constitute very serious objections. It appears to us more feasible that lunatic districts should have each its own receptacle for chronic cases. Improved Treatment. Receptacles for Chronic cases.

WORKHOUSES.

Class of Inmates.

In regard to sex, two-thirds of the combined classes are females, aged, physically debilitated, and long resident. As a rule, too, the males are similarly circumstanced, both sexes giving but little trouble. Occasionally, however, if individuals become irritable or refractory, they are at once transferred as dangerous lunatics, too often, it must be confessed, under frivolous pretexts, to district asylums; and thus it occurs without the least actual benefit, in a curative point of view, to parties whose far advanced life and bodily weakness exclude the hope of recovery, that institutions erected for other objects become overcrowded, to the exclusion of curable cases, and of cases which, however unpromising, need special supervision.

THE CENTRAL ASYLUM.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL, OR DUNDRUM ASYLUM.

With reference to the central asylum at Dundrum for criminal lunatics, now in its thirtieth year of operation, having, from the beginning, had its unlimited management, we feel justified in reporting that it continues to progress in the same satisfactory manner we have hitherto noticed. Originally constructed for 80 males and 40 females—there being at the date of its opening 186 individuals criminally insane in district asylums or in gaols—a necessity was entailed on the Inspectors to select from out that number those only whose crimes were of such a serious nature, or whose propensities were so vicious, though charged only with misdemeanours, as to render them particular objects for detention in a State institution. To have placed lunatics in it, well-conducted, and accused simply of petty offences, though thereby actually coming within the category of criminal, appeared to us uncalled for.

Enlargement.

In 1864, owing to a progressive overcrowding, the accommodation of the asylum was enlarged by 50 beds at the male side, that at the female remaining unchanged. Gradually, since then, the number of patients has been increasing—so much so that on the 31st of December last year, there were resident in the establishment 177—140 men and 37 women. At no period, however, has there been an excess of the latter sex beyond the primitive complement. Two peculiar circumstances have tended to the repletion of the Dundrum more rapidly than to that of an ordinary district asylum—1st, the mortality in it has not exceeded 3¼ per cent. in a year on the average under treatment, as against 8 elsewhere; 2ndly, when a patient recovers, a discharge does not necessarily follow, and under no circumstance is an uncured lunatic let out on probation before the close of his legal imprisonment.

Overcrowded state.

Within the past twelvemonth a larger number of criminals (23) was admitted than in any other year subsequent to its occupation—the great majority of them coming from convict prisons, and composed of persons who, prior to their conviction, had shown no symptoms of insanity. In fact, it has been latterly observable that offenders of every kind, when sent to gaol for a longer or shorter period, are particularly subject to delusions—possibly from being well skilled in the art of malingering. Some also become so pertinaciously troublesome as to interfere with prison discipline. THE CENTRAL ASYLUM.

Under existing circumstances it is clear, as suggested by the resident physician, that additional provision against growing pressure may soon be urgently needed at the Dundrum asylum, as nothing could be more detrimental to such an institution than a deficiency of means for classification and a due supervision. There appear to us only two alternatives to meet exigencies, and at the same time obviate an enlargement of the buildings, one having regard to the ages of inmates, there being in it patients old, decrepit, harmless, and inoffensive, some of whom, if not guilty of homicide or crimes of a grave character, might be pardoned, discharged, and disposed of locally—government paying for their maintenance elsewhere, and thereby saving fully £16 a year per head during their lives; the other, by adopting a suggestion at one time mooted by us, which has found favour in various American States, particularly in Pennsylvania, where, as Dr. Kirkbride says, "Settle the matter as we may, part of a prison must be converted into an hospital for insane, or part of an hospital into a prison; it needs no argument to show that the first is more desirable, injuring no one, and scarcely depriving any one of a single important advantage." If then at any existing or future depôt, in a wholesome locality, with ample ground around it, a small portion of the premises could be allocated to convict prisoners attacked, while under confinement, with actual or pretended mania, the expense of structural additions at Dundrum, where the amount of land is restricted, would be avoided. Increase of accommodation for criminal lunatics.

We ourselves have long felt that "the simulation of madness exercises a baneful influence on prisoners, inducing them to attempt a similar course in the hope of removal to an asylum, where restraint being less, the chances of escape become greater."

Of the present inmates in the Central asylum—numbering 140 males and 37 females—69 are entered as homicides—57 males and 12 females; while of persons charged with assaults endangering life, and with others of an aggravated character, there are no less than 41; 4 only being of the female sex. There are 11 individuals convicted of burglary in the house—all males; the difference, making up a total of 177, is composed of minor offenders under confinement, in equal proportion as to sex. There were 7 discharges in the year just expired—the period of imprisonment having terminated in each case; they were relegated to their native district asylums; 6 died from natural causes. No accident nor attempt to escape occurred. Classification of Inmates.

As regards education, 54 per cent. of the inmates are utterly uninstructed, while 70 per cent. of those in ordinary asylums can read or write. The unmarried stand fully as 3 to 1 in proportion to the married and widowed. Somewhat more than half of the males belong to the farming and labouring classes; 11 were soldiers or members of the police force. The remainder had been engaged in various trades, or were employed in domestic occupations. Education.

THE CENTRAL ASYLUM.

Curables.

Classified as to their mental condition, 10 only are recognised as being of sound mind; 18 are probably curable, who, in the event of recovery, will be duly brought by us under the notice of the Executive; 149 labour under various types of insanity. As a rule, we are happy to report that the inmates of the Dundrum asylum are well disposed and orderly—very many of them industriously employed; for example, 72 men on an average are daily occupied on the farm, within doors, in ordinary domestic, or artisan works; and 24 women in the laundry or in assisting the attendants.

Chaplains.

Religious observances are not neglected—there being two very neat and separate chapels (Protestant and Catholic) where clergymen regularly perform divine service.

Absence of restraint.

The fullest liberty compatible with the safety of the patients, and that freedom from an undue restraint observable in well regulated asylums, continue to characterize the management of this institution.

Cost.

The capitation rate, a few shillings less than in the preceding year, amounted to £35 in 1878, as calculated on expenditure and the daily average under treatment.

Subjoined is the report of Dr. Ashe, Resident Physician:—

"CENTRAL ASYLUM, DUNDRUM,
13*th May*, 1879.

"GENTLEMEN,—I have the honour herewith to submit to you my report on this asylum for the year ended 31st December, 1878, to accompany the statistical tables for the same period.

"I am happy to be able to give a favourable report regarding the health of the inmates during the year. The deaths have been only four males and two females, making a total per-centage of less than 3·5 on the daily average number of patients—viz., 172. One of the male patients died from typhoid fever, with severe pulmonary complications; the other deaths were due to the usual chronic and senile diseases commonly to be found among asylum patients. No death occurred through violence or suicide, and no serious accident took place within the period referred to, neither did any escape occur. The admissions were 23, and the discharges 7, leaving the number of inmates increased by 10, as the result of the change of population during the year. The pressure on our space, already too limited, has thus become much more inconvenient, alike in dormitories, dayrooms, and dining hall.

"The expenditure for the calendar year 1878, under the Treasury subheads, amounted to £6,300 2*s.* 2*d.*, and that on the farm and garden to £423 9*s.* 4*d.*, making a total outlay of £6,723 11*s.* 6*d.* Against this must be set off on the credit side the proceeds of the farm and garden being valued at £699 8*s.* 2*d.*, which, with Exchequer extra receipts, £2 16*s.* 6*d.*, and the small sum of 17*s.* 6*d.* fines, makes a credit total of £703 2*s.* 2*d.*, leaving an actual cost of £6,020 9*s.* 4*d.*, or exactly £35 per head on the average number of patients resident. The farm produce, it must be again observed, is, according to Treasury instructions, estimated at the lowest possible figure, so as in each financial year only just to cover the actual expenditure under this subhead. If valued according to market prices it would considerably exceed the sum named. The moral condition of the inmates has been satisfactory during past twelvemonth; seclusion has rarely been necessary, and mechanical restraint has only been used in two cases. One of these was a demented male patient, who was in the habit of suddenly and without any provocation knocking down on the flags any aged or feeble patient who might happen to be near him. His intelligence not being capable of apprehending either remonstrance or confinement, I determined to try and break this dangerous habit; and accordingly I confined his hands merely by a belt and straps. This treatment, persevered in for three months, was, as I had hoped, completely successful in curing him of his dangerous propensity. The other case was a female, liable to sudden and violent outbursts of homicidal mania. Deeming it essential to adopt some means of protecting patients and attendants alike against her violence, and finding prolonged seclusion injurious to her health, I allow her to go about with a loose but strong canvas camisole over her dress, her hands being free inside; she thus enjoys a good deal of liberty without danger to others.

"The contract provisions and clothing supplied during the year have been in most cases satisfactory. I have, however, been occasionally dissatisfied with the bread supplied, as being inferior to the sample furnished. Samples of such provisions unfortunately cannot be kept for comparison.

"I have to advert to the difficulties arising in the management of the house, and indeed the danger incurred by patients and attendants alike, as also the chances of escape of the patients, in consequence of the fact that at present no authority empowers me to engage temporary attendants on the staff while a vacancy is being permanently filled. It has more than once happened in consequence, that, the staff being, from various causes, reduced in numbers, there has been, at particular times of the day, but one attendant who could be placed on duty to watch an entire division. I trust this matter may receive your earnest consideration; and that I may receive authority to engage at any moment a temporary employé to fill for the time being a casual vacancy on the staff.

"I am, Gentlemen,

"Your obedient Servant,

"ISAAC ASHE, M.D., T.C.D.

"The Inspectors, Asylums Office."

The suggestion contained in the latter paragraph having been also brought before the Inspectors in official course, a long correspondence ensued—the result arrived at being that, inasmuch as compliance therewith was ascertained to be difficult of reconciliation with Regulations established by the Treasury and Civil Service Commissioners, it was thought better to improve the system followed under these Regulations. This has been done; and the Inspectors are of opinion that if under it, as so improved, due regard is paid to primary qualifications, and promptitude exercised in selecting candidates, the difficulties made by the Resident Physician will soon vanish. No practical difficulty could arise if Attendants were not permitted to resign without one month's notice or forfeiture of pay.

PRIVATE ASYLUMS.

PRIVATE ASYLUMS.

Little variation in them.

No alteration has taken place in the number of these establishments, which is precisely the same as in the year 1877, neither can we say that any feature of interest presented itself during the past twelve months, while as regards the patients located in them, they exhibited scarcely a variation —642 being under treatment on the 31st December, 1878, as against 636 at a corresponding date in 1877. A similar proportion held good in the two preceding years; in fact since 1874 there has not been a difference of 8 annually under treatment—a circumstance which indicates so far at least as the better classes of society are concerned, that lunacy cannot be on the increase which is so much apprehended by the public. The admissions were 169, of which 143 were first attacks, and 26 relapses—males amounting to 77, and females to 92, making in all a total number under treatment of 804; the patients discharged during the year as recovered were 66—improved, 35—unimproved, 17—constituting an aggregate of 118, 46 being males, and 72 females. There was 44 deaths, equally divisible between both sexes.

Statistics.

We are happy to say that no fatality occurred from violence, suicide, or any accidental cause.

How conducted.

As a rule we feel justified in stating that a due attention has been bestowed on those entrusted to their care, by the proprietors of these establishments, some of which, as we have remarked in previous reports, are on an equality with the best elsewhere. Others, however, do not afford all those domestic advantages and enjoyments which we could desire; but fairly taking into consideration the limited stipends not unfrequently paid, and, as we are informed, the occasional difficulty in obtaining these stipends, a due allowance must be made for certain deficiencies.

No complaints.

No justifiable causes of complaint in regard to unkindness of treatment have been made known to us during the past year; while our frequent visits to private licensed houses afford ample opportunities to the individuals detained in them, of communicating directly with the Inspectors. It is, however, but natural to suppose that persons deprived of their liberty, possessed, too, in many instances, of a considerable amount of intelligence, though subject to strong and fixed delusions, may naturally be discontented with their condition; as well as others who, by a recklessness of conduct out of doors, and their unaccountable demeanour and language at home, bring themselves, at least for a time, within the category of those who are insane, and even dangerous.

Characteristics of insanity.

Intoxication.

There is also a third class—comprising individuals of both sexes —who, from an inveterate indulgence in spirituous liquors, forgetting all the duties of social life, and utterly disregarding truth and solemn promises of amendment, compromise their own safety. These placed under restraint in due legal form, and certified to be insane by competent physicians, cause much anxiety to public officers in the capacity of Inspectors as to the period of their detention. In regard to such we can only exercise a conscientious discretion. PRIVATE ASYLUMS.

The clauses of the statute, 5 and 6 Vic., cap. 33, under which private asylums are regulated, on the whole are fairly carried out, certainly without any culpable abuse.

Irregularities from time to time occur as respects the admission of patients on single certificates, but not being from improper motives, may be rectified within a reasonable period. Anxious at all times to afford every latitude to the inmates of private asylums, we find it to increase from year to year, for patients, instead of being isolated and confined as formerly, are now frequently allowed to visit their friends for a definite time on probation. Probationary visits.

We cannot, however, but think, and have long felt it to be the case, that the fact of a member of a family being placed in a lunatic asylum, and his maintenance paid for, affords no excuse on the part of his relatives for subsequent neglect which—in our opinion, cannot but be deemed a grave omission, and quite as unjustifiable in mental as it would be in physical afflictions. Neglect of relatives.

The four unlicensed houses for the reception of private patients, being of a self-supporting character, and admitting certain inmates without payment, namely—Swift's Hospital, the Friend's Asylum, Richmond, under the management of religious sisters, and Stewart's Institution, continue to be conducted in the same praiseworthy manner in which we have hitherto represented them. The inmates of the last-named institution, formerly situated at Lucan, now occupy a very spacious, massive building, surrounded by some thirty acres of land, at Palmerstown, within five miles of the city of Dublin. Its past system of management affords the best security for its future and well-merited success. Free Asylums.

The annexed Appendices, containing statistical returns which have been prepared with a scrupulous regard to accuracy, afford, it is hoped, all necessary details connected with the working of the Lunacy Department of this country.

Most respectfully submitting the preceding Report to your Grace,

We have the honour to be,

Your Grace's obedient servants,

JOHN NUGENT.

Note (Table 16).—Several of the articles enumerated are not supplied by contract, but are currently purchased at the prevalent market prices. This is, however, merely the case in regard to the smaller articles the consumption of which is only occasional, and not daily, or at stated periods. The Resident Physician reported that he thought this practice might be extended with advantage, so as to enable him to purchase some of the heavier items. The Inspectors, feeling it would be in contravention of the spirit of the Privy Council Rules, declined to give their sanction, although occasionally by buying at larger sales an economy might result.
